DEATHS PUSH COUNTY TOLL TO 25 FOR '41

Ashlanders Fatally Hurt on Way To City To Bowl as Cars Crash on Route 42.

NINE KILLED IN STATE

Rain and Fog Peril Traffic Throughout Ohio; Launch Probe In Mishap Here.

Two Ashland youths on their way to Mansfield to bowl were fatally injured in a two-car crash shortly before 3 p. m. Sunday on U. S. Route 42 three miles northeast of Mansfield.

The victims were John Beauford Ziegler, 17, senior in Ashland high school, and Lester Hesson, 19, an employe of the Ohio Bell Telephone company at Cleveland. Both died in Mansfield General hospital, Ziegler last night and Hesson this morning.

The multiple deaths brought the Richland county traffic fatalities to 25 for the first 11 months of the year, five more than during all of last year.

At least nine persons died in Ohio traffic over the week-end and 10 were injured in three mishaps in the Mansfield area as rain and fog created a double traffic hazard.

State highway patrolmen today asked Prosecutor Harold Lutz to investigate the U. S. Route 42 crash in which the two Ashlanders were fatally injured. Three other young people, including a Mansfield youth, suffered injuries in the same mishap.

Ziegler and Hesson were riding with Robert Ray Emperio, 18, Ashland, who said his car skidded as he attempted to slow down back of a truck and turned crossways in the highway. State highway patrolmen said the car then was struck broadside by one driven by Maynard G. Sams, 22, of 90 East First street, Mansfield, who

State Board In City But Gets No Liquor Complaints

The state liquor control board held a public hearing in Mansfield today but received no complaints from citizens on any illegal action by local liquor permit holders.

Harry E. Hawley, chairman of the board and former Mansfield postmaster, headed the group which met in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Farmers Bank building from 9 to 11 a. m.

Hawley said that no complaints had been made to the board and that the session was taken up in the discussion of technicalities with attending permit-holders.

Following the hearing here, the board moved on to Sandusky where it planned to conduct an afternoon hearing. Tomorrow the group will open hearings in the council chambers in Cleveland and will continue them throughout the week.

The state law provides that the control board hold at least four public hearings annually. The sessions at Mansfield, Sandusky and Cleveland will be followed by another in Columbus before the end of the year, according to Hawley.

Glum Over Outlook on Rail Peace

Board Chairman Reports 'Not So Good' After Compromise Talks.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Chairman Wayne Lyman Morse of the special fact-finding board created by President Roosevelt to seek a settlement of railway labor's demands for increased wages, said today "the situation doesn't look so good" for immediate settlement of the dispute.

He made the statement after the board had conferred with representatives of railroad management and the 19 brotherhoods —the so-called "Big Five" operating brotherhoods and the 14 non-operating brotherhoods — for nearly 24 hours.

The "Big Five" have voted to strike beginning next Sunday if no settlement is reached by then. The non-operators also have voted to strike but have set no date.

Morse's statement came when the negotiators took a brief breakfast recess. He said talks would be resumed in a short while, however.

"Although I haven't given up hope, the situation doesn't look so good," he told reporters. "It hasn't looked so good for the last three hours as it did earlier in the evening."

He said a "general picture for a compromise settlement" had developed from the 24-hour meeting which began at 9:30 a. m. yesterday, but he did not believe the board would be able to report a settlement to President Roosevelt before late afternoon or this evening.

He said he would keep management and brotherhood officials in session all day and all night if it appeared that a compromise could be agreed upon.

If further efforts fail to effect a settlement, he added, the board "will make some recommendations of its own."

It was learned shortly before dawn that management and the operating brotherhoods had agreed on a compromise formula which needed acquiescence of the non-operators to become effective.

This plan was said to have been a compromise between the $1 a day wage increase demanded by the operating unions and a 72 cents a day increase reportedly offered by management last night.

PARDONS WRITER

Governor Frees Author of 'Out of the Night.'

LOS ANGELES— (U.P.) —Governor Culbert L. Olson has pardoned Jan Valtin from a prison sentence for assault during a hold-up.

The German-born writer, whose "Out of the Night"—a purported expose of Communist and Nazi activities—was a best-seller, said at Dallas, Texas, when informed of the pardon yesterday:

"The first round of the fight against deportation is won."

Valtin, whose true name is Richard Krebs, is on a lecture tour. Seized last March for deportation, he pleaded for a chance to apply for citizenship. If returned to Germany, he said, he would be beheaded.

Krebs pleaded guilty to a charge of assault with a deadly weapon upon Maurice L. Goodstein, 67-year-old Jewish merchant of Los Angeles.

DECIDES ON TAX REQUEST PLAN

Miller Says He'll Ask For Special Council Committee To Press Fund Demand.

City council, meeting tomorrow night will be asked to select a committee to represent Mansfield at a state-wide meeting of municipal executives in Columbus on Tuesday, Dec. 11, to map a campaign to obtain a share of the state's $11,000,000 sales tax surplus.

Fred Miller, chairman of council's finance committee, who has stated that he favors the use of any of the surplus the city might receive for immediate improvement of the municipal airport, said today that he would ask discussion of the matter at tomorrow night's meeting.

Miller has disagreed with Mayor W. J. Locke's statement that the campaign for sales tax money started by mayors of northern Ohio cities is "largely political." The mayor has announced that although he will attend the Columbus meeting he does not intend to ask for a share of the tax surplus for Mansfield.

Petain Talks With Goering, Entry Into 'New Order' Seen

(By United Press)

Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, aged head of the French state, conferred today with Reichsmarshal Wilhelm Goering, the No. 2 man in the government of his country's conqueror, and it was believed that he was agreeing to details of France's entrance into the Nazi's "new order."

It was the culmination of a violent campaign of segments of the Vichy government, of the German-controled Paris press, and of pro-German Frenchmen in Paris extending over a year for full Franco-German "collaboration."

Reports emanating from Europe by private means had suggested that Adolf Hitler himself was one of the conferees. The Vichy announcement made no mention of Hitler.

That the stage was set for an important development in what the Germans and the Vichy-French call "collaboration" had been made evident by a series of developments. It was pointed out by well-informed persons that Hitler, or even Goering, would scarcely meet with Petain merely to negotiate with a conquered foe. These negotiations have been completed by the professional diplomats, it was suggested, and today's meeting was arranged for Petain to sign on the dotted line.

Refinery Explosion Kills One, Injures 15 In Oklahoma.

OKMULGEE, Okla.—(AP)—One man was killed and 15 others injured today as an explosion ripped through the gasoline plant of the Phillips Petroleum company refinery.

The explosion and fire apparently centered in the accumulators and tanks of the gasoline department. The refinery normally employs 350 to 400 workers.

Firemen reported that the flames still menaced one of the largest storage tanks at the plant and that they were battling to prevent it from exploding. Two ambulance attendants, Leonard Davis and Carney Wise, were burned as they worked to rescue injured men.

NAZIS DRIVEN FARTHER WEST FROM ROSTOV

HITLER'S MARSHAL MOVES

Reported Leaving Mariupol In Face of Red Advance; Moscow Fight Develops.

BULLETIN

BERLIN —(AP)— German soldiers in advance units battling toward the Russian capital now "can see Moscow with the aid of good field glasses," a German military spokesman declared tonight.

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW — Severely battered German troops, hurled back through village after village in a retreat from Rostov that has become the biggest Nazi reversal of the Russian campaign, have been unable to stem the Red army's counter drive and are in danger of being cut off by a new thrust from the north, the Moscow radio declared today.

Quoting dispatches to Pravda from the southern front, the broadcast said the new Soviet thrust developed yesterday morning in the shell-pocked Donets basin northwest of Rostov, where the advance might open a corridor to the Sea of Azov which would cut off the hotly-engaged German rear guard.

The report to Pravda declared hard-riding Russian cavalrymen, first to carry the red banner back into Rostov, kept up their charge for miles beyond the city and broke up repeated German attempts to form a new line.

Other Red army units, the Pravda correspondent reported, ousted the Germans from towns identified as "B" and "K," along with many other large and small villages, in a 14-mile advance over fields strewn with Nazi dead and littered with the abandoned wreckage of German tanks and guns.

These advances, the Russians declared, hurled the Nazis back to Taganrog, 40 miles west of Rostov, then kept them on the retreat along the road to Mariupol, another 60 miles to the west.

REFUSES PAROLE

Governor Declines To Pardon Ku Klux Floggers.

ATLANTA — (AP) — Governor Eugene Talmadge today refused to pardon or parole six convicted floggers who were identified at their trials as members of the Ku Klux Klan.

The governor's action followed a sensational hearing last week at which the six white men's plea of clemency was opposed by a large number of Atlanta ministers and other persons.

The convicted floggers had carried on a reign of terror in suburban Atlanta for several years, according to Assistant Solicitor General Dan Duke. The state prison and parole board had previously declined to recommend clemency.

Try to Delay Final Decision On U.S. Terms

Tokyo Spokesmen Admit 'Wide Gap' In Washington, Nippon Viewpoints; War Preparations Speeded Throughout Far East.

(By International News Service)

TOKYO — Anxious to postpone a fatal decision "until the last moment," the government of Premier Hideki Tojo held another extraordinary session today and decided to continue current negotiations with the United States, the semi-official news agency Domei said.

Government spokesmen emphasized, however, that a "wide gap" still exists between the Japanese and American viewpoints.

Japan may ask the United States to reconsider its attitude in an effort to avert catastrophe, it was said, on the grounds there is at present too great a difference between Japanese and American policies to enable formulation of basic principles at the moment.

Japan's decision to continue negotiations, Domei said, may be traced to her desire "to preserve peace in the Pacific."

Despite this apparent official disposition to negotiate for peace so long as such negotiation is in the realm of possibility, there was a new flurry of war moves throughout the Far East:

According to a German wireless report heard here, United States consular officials not only requested but ordered immediate evacuation of all American nationals still in Shanghai.

The Tokyo newspaper Kukumin Shimbun announced that collection of scrap iron and copper for armament purposes will be made in all Japanese households commencing immediately.

Domei reported from Bangkok that United States Minister William Peck had ordered wholesale evacuation of all American residents of Thailand.

It was understood Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo told the cabinet members that the Washington talks between Secretary of State Cordell Hull and the Japanese representatives have entered an "extremely important" stage.

(Editor's note: A Saigon radio broadcast picked up in Singapore said it had been announced that Japan is temporarily suspending dispatch of fresh troops to French Indo-China.)

The cabinet was reported to have found a major difference between the Japanese and American points of view but have decided,

Kurusu Says He Doesn't Hold Final Reply To U. S. Terms; Hopes Talks To Go On.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Secretary of State Cordell Hull conferred with Japan's two envoys for one hour and five minutes today on the Far Eastern crisis.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Saburo Kurusu, special American envoy to the United States said today that Japan has not yet rejected the American terms for an understanding in the Pacific and hopes that the discussions will continue.

The Japanese envoy made this known prior to a conference with Secretary of State Hull at the state department during the morning. He asserted that Gen. Hedeki Tojo, Japanese premier, had been "misquoted" in the reports which quoted Tojo as saying that American and British "exploitation" must be "purged" with a "vengeance" from Asia.

"I am not bringing any final reply to the American note," Kursu told reporters. "There is nothing sensational today. I think there will be further discussions after today. We certainly hope so."

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Lieut Col. Chester W. Goble, state selective service director, charged today that "interested individuals and in some instances groups of individuals" had subjected local draft board members to "undue and unfair methods" to obtain deferments for registrants.

He said that reports of attempted coercion of local board members were made to state headquarters "almost daily."

Goble declared that persons who attempt to coerce or intimidate local board members are "in direct conflict with the provisions of the selective service act" and may be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years or a fine of not more than $10,000 or both.

In an opinion to Harold K. Bostwick, Geauga county prosecutor, the attorney general held that constables, as referred to in the traffic code, are peace officers and therefore are excluded from enforcing traffic laws on state highways.

They Saw War, Will Tell About It Here Dec. 11

ROBERT G. NIXON

Two of the nation's outstanding war correspondents will bring a vivid, first-hand picture of the second World war to Mansfield the night of Dec. 11 when they are scheduled to speak at the city's twelfth annual Community Christmas show.

Funds raised at the show will buy Christmas baskets for needy Mansfield families. The community show will be sponsored jointly by The News-Journal, Mansfield Community Fund, and the Junior Association of Commerce.

In the Christmas program spotlight will be Robert G. Nixon, International News Service correspondent who escaped with the British soldiers from the Dunkidk ordeal, and Richard C. Hottelet, United Press writer and an authority on Germany and Hitler's war machine.

Nixon was sent to the European war scene in October, 1939, shortly after England delcared war on Hitler.

"We all missed death by a hair many times," he said in commenting on his escape with the British army from Dunkirk. "I missed it by a matter of three minutes at Boulogne, simply because I happened to walk some 300 yards down the waterfront from where I had been watching a night air raid."

Nixon covered the Nazi air raids on the British Isles in 1940, returning to this country early this year to re-join the (INS) Washington staff.

Hottelet was in Germany for four years before the war and had an opportunity to study the Nazi preparation for invesion of virtually all of Europe. Since returning to the United States in the interests of preserving peace in the Pacific, to continue negotiations "until the last moment."

With tension rapidly growing more taut, the newspaper Nichi Nichi charged that British military pressure is threatening Thailand's neutrality.

"Britain is massing large forces along the Thai-Malayan border as if to coerce Thailand into joining the Anglo-American camp," Nichi Nichi said.

"Many air stations and permanent army bases have been hastily constructed along the Thai-Malayan and Thai-Burmese borders, to which Chunking troops are rushing.

"Thailand's neutrality cannot be expected to be maintained forever."

The newspaper Asahi warned both Thailand and French Indo-China against the "pitfalls of Anglo-American propaganda," and expressed doubts Thailand would be able to remain neutral.

Amid fears the conversations with the United States would break down, warnings were issued to the Japanese public to prepare for the "worst."

Togo, in a speech to the East Asia society last night, declared the United States is likely to "refuse to understand present Asiatic conditions" and to "attempt the application of fantastic principles inconsistent with the present state of the world."

Earlier Tojo in a nationwide broadcast condemned the "scheming European and American powers" for their collaboration with Chunking to "mar Japan's endeavors." He proclaimed the solidarity of Japan, Manchukuo and Japanese-occupied China to build a "new order" despite all difficulties.

These speeches led to belief that the Japanese had decided to reject the memorandum from Hull reaffirming America's fundamental principles in the Far East. In still another address an influential army spokesman, Lieut. Gen. Kisaburo Ando, said the Netherlands East Indies "will be summarly finished, once Japanese forces move against it."

Foreign Minister Togo declared in his address:

"The United States tends not only to ignore present conditions in East Asia, but is vainly trying to translate idle, theoretical principles into practice.

"This is hampering the establishment of the new order in East Asia."

Gen. Ando, facing a wildly cheering crowd, demanded:

"Can the Dutch depend on Britain?"

And he warned: "Japan is fully prepared for the worst."

Orders Mobilizing Of Indies Air Force

BATAVIA—(INS)—The governor general of the Dutch East Indies today ordered mobilization of the East Indies military air force.

All reserve officers and men subject to military service were ordered to report immediately.

Says Japs Can't Attack Thailand

CHUNGKING, China—(INS)—T. F. Thiang, secretary general of the Chinese executive yuan, told correspondents today that "Japan is not ready and probably has not strength enough" to invade Thailand.

In the event the Washington negotiations break down, he said, the Japanese probably will launch a new attack on China.

Thiang said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek is "completely satisfied" with the attitude of the United States as demonstrated in the negotiations wih Japan and added the Chinese government often has communicated its views regarding the talks to the American government.

Now's Time To Fight Japan, Says Grant

WASHINGTON —(UP)— Hugh G Grant, who recently resigned as United States minister to Thailand, said today that "If the Japanese really want war, now is the time to let them have it."

"I believe we could smash them within the period of a few months with our superior naval and air forces," he said in a statement.

He said he did not believe that Japan now would attempt any actual military moves which might bring on war in the Far East. He said the Japanese "do a lot of talking" and "are past masters at the old game bluff... but their policy is to grab when there is little or no danger to themselves."

Crisis Brings FDR Back To Capital

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The extreme gravity of the Pacific crisis brought President Roosevelt hurriedly back to the capital today from an interrupted vacation, and all attention fixed on a special conference which Japanese envoys requested with Secretary of State Hull.

In view of the week-end's disquieting developments, the general belief of diplomatic sources was that the conference was for the purpose of delivering Tokyo's formal reply to the statement of basic principles which the United States set forth last week as essential to peace in the Pacific.

Cables from the Far East gave a grim background to this conference and to the consultation arranged between Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Hull shortly after the arrival of the presidential train.

Foremost was the declaration of Premier Hideki Tojo Saturday that Japan "must purge" American and British influence "from East Asia with a vengeance." Last night the Tokyo radio broadcast the words of Vice-Admiral Shigeichi Koga, commander of the Japanese fleet in China waters, who was quoted as saying that "the China affair has now become part of the World war as a result of the so-called ABCD (American, British, Dutch, Chinese) encirclement."

At Hongkong the British military command took "precautionary dispositions" and placed the garrison "in an advanced state of readiness." War fears grew in the Philippines, where U. S. army and navy units were reported ordered on the alert. Thailand—one possible objective for the Japanese forces massed in French Indo-China—was resigned to becoming a battleground. British reinforcements were pouring into adjacent Burma. And a state of emergency was reported declared at Britain's great Singapore fortress.

The conference of the two diplomats with Secretary Hull was arranged after the president's special train had headed north and apparently did not figure in the president's decision to cut short his brief vacation in the deep south.

Just what development or series of developments influenced Mr. Roosevelt was a matter of conjecture, but the utterances of Premier Tojo apparently were an important factor.

The president's reaction was immediate. From his Pine mountain cottage at Warm Springs, Ga., he talked twice with Hull by telephone. Then he ended his visit abruptly and started back here.

The vacation had lasted just 26 hours.

At the state department yesterday Secretary Hull held an unusual Sunday meeting with Lord Halifax, the British ambassador. It was described as a general exchange of the latest information on the Far Eastern situation.

SWALLOWS BUILD NEW HOMES TOO

PUEBLO, Colo.—(U.P.)—For years swallows returned each spring to their mud nests at the Female Center building of the Colorado State hospital—just like their famous cousins of the San Juan Capistrano.

They returned on the same date each year and every autumn all departed en masse, as regular as a clock.

Last winter the Female Center, an old structure, was abandoned by hospital inmates in preparation for its demolition.

When the swallows returned this spring they inspected the building and evidently decided that if it was not inhabited they wouldn't live in eaves of newer buildings about it either. So they built mud nests in other old buildings on the grounds.

NAZIS DRIVEN FARTHER WEST FROM ROSTOV

that the German commander in the south, Field Marshal Ewald Von Kliest, had moved his headquarters back to Mariupol two days ago and now was on the move again farther to the rear.

(CBS quoted the radio as saying that the second Russian counter drive was forcing Axis troops in the Donets back toward industrial Stalino, 100 miles northwest of Rostov.)

Another large scale battle was reported developing around Moscow.

Axis Penetrates British Libya Front

BULLETIN

LONDON — (INS) — British troops have re-established the positions at Sidi Rezegh where German forces previously broke through, authoritative British circles announced at 3:30 p. m. today (9:30 a. m., EST).

CAIRO — (INS) — The British high command today admitted Axis penetration of bitterly-won areas in North Africa today in a communique disclosing widespread extension of combat throughout Libya.

The British concede German and Italian penetration of their positions around Sidi Rezegh. The gigantic battle is now distributed over three main areas, it was said and heavy casualties are believed to have been inflicted on the enemy.

The communique said:

"The battle of Syrenaica has definitely resolved itself into three main areas.

"First, the main front southeast of Tobruk where our forces advancing from the east joined up with forces from the fortress.

"Second, the frontier area stretching from Halfaya to positions north of Sidi Omar.

"Third, the Gialo area."

"On the main front, Ed Duda, Sidi Rezegh and Dir-El-Hamed, intensive fighting continued throughout yesterday. During the morning, an enemy tank attack from the west was repulsed by our armored forces due south of Sidi Rezegh.

"Later our armored forces turned on the Italian Ariete division and destroyed half of its remaining tanks. The others fled northward, pursued by British mobile columns.

"In the frontier zone, our troops are concentrating upon elimination of pockets of resistance in the face of determined opposition by German defenders. Throughout the day, our air forces closely supported ground forces by heavy and persistent attacks upon enemy troop concentrations and vehicles in the area between El Adem and Ed Duda.

"Observed results of our bombing and low-flying attacks are highly satisfactory.

"In the afternoon (yesterday), German infantry with tank support again attacked our positions about Sidi Rezegh, where they were successful in making a penetration of our defenses. Bitter fighting continues in this area."

Assert British Will Declare War On Finns

LONDON — (U.P.) — The usually well informed British Press association said today that Great Britain had decided to declare war on Finland and might at the same time declare war on Hungary and Rumania.

The diplomatic correspondent of the press association said the report came first in messages from the United States that the British government had already decided to declare war against Finland and an announcement to the effect might be made almost immediately.

Report Sinking of Armed Raider

LONDON—(INS)—Sinking of a German vessel, believed to be an armed merchant raider, in the South Atlantic on Nov. 22 was announced by the British admiralty today.

The communique said the German ship was sent to the bottom by the 9,850-ton British cruiser Devonshire. Presence of a Nazi U-boat in the vicinity prevented rescue of the survivors.

The German raider assertedly attempted to escape behind a smoke-screen but blew up when a shell from the Devonshire hit an ammunition magazine.

Germans Admit Evacuating Rostov

BERLIN—(AP)—A German military spokesman today declared the city of Rostov was evacuated by the German troops because of the fighting with civilians with resulting "unnecessary losses" and to take more favorable positions to meet the Russian assault.

He asserted the Germans in the Rostov area were faced by Russian forces greatly superior in number.

The spokesman declined to say how far the troops withdrew but emphatically denied that it was far as Taganrog, 40 miles west of Rostov.

The Russians "are nowhere near Taganrog," he said.

According to the German analysis, there are three major operations at present under way, in the Moscow and Rostov areas and in northern Africa.

The spokesman expresed the opinion the Moscow operations are reaching their culmination faster and at present were promising a decision sooner than in the other sections.

A Russian attempt to break out of Leningrad with a tank sortie across the ice of the frozen Neva river was broken up and 30 tanks, including "six mammoth ones," were captured, the German high command announced today.

The high command said the Russian "blood sacrifices" were heavy and a number of prisoners were captured.

German bombers were reported to have sunk an ice breaker and damaged a large freighter in the waters around the Russian naval base of Kronstadt.

The high command reported air attacks on Moscow and Leningrad.

DECIDES ON TAX REQUEST PLAN

Miller Says He'll Ask For Special Council Committee To Press Fund Demand.

man last week said that council was ready to appropriate at least $5,000 annually for improvement of the port if the administration would supply "an intelligent and well-planned program." The mayor said a program is being formulated.

Although this may be its last meeting, the present council has six Democratic members and three Republicans. After the first of the year, the balance of power will swing to the Republicans who added four members at the November election.

The Democrats, however, could successfully pass a resolution sending a delegation to the Columbus meeting. The three Republicans now holding office have announced their support of an airport improvement program as have two of the new Republican councilmen coming in on Jan. 1.

Mayor Locke has said he does not believe the city could spare founds for the work of improving the airport and said that federal governmental funds would have to be obtained.

The airport is in need of hard-surface runways. Since the airport was purchased in 1925, the city has spent only $11,000 on the port's improvement. Last week, a training program for 24 South American fliers scheduled to be held in Mansfield was transferred to Lockport, Ill., after Civil aeronautics authorities declared the muddy runways here made the airport unfit for the program.

GOOD ALIBI

Judge Hears a Brand New Story In Traffic Court.

HOUSTON, Tex.—(INS)—Houston traffic court judge Lawrence Du Mars is pretty much accustomed to anything during the course of his judicial activities.

But it gave him a jolt when he got a letter from a Beaumont man who said he thought the city of Houston ought to pay his speeding fine.

He explained that if a lot of the city's side streets hadn't been flooded, he might have been able to evade the arresting officers by turning off the boulevard where he was nabbed.

Du Mars wasn't impressed. He initiated steps to make the speeder pay his fine, rain or no rain.

The Walls Came Tumbling + +

By Joseph McCord

(Copyright, 1941.)

CHAPTER V

He had thought the name of Jericho amusing. It recalled the Good Samaritan. And her own pointless contribution about falling among thieves. That was it! He had looked at her queerly when she said it. Was he trying to tell her that he had? Could he mean—Andy! The uneasiness she had felt during the last hour became a big fear that rose in her throat now, made her heart throb.

He couldn't have meant that. He couldn't! Why, Andy had been in Jericho for more than five years, this time. He'd rarely been away overnight. Everybody knew him. Everybody. Or did they? Could all this be something from the days when Andy wasn't in Jericho? Before he came home to stay? "There are ways now and then . . . with luck." Why should that remark of Andy's at the supper table come tumbling into her mind from nowhere? He always was saying funny things, things he didn't mean. If only that one hadn't followed on the heels of a suggestion that Jed Harper might have fired his own barn for the sake of the insurance. Silly. But she had to reassure herself in some way.

When Carol reached the dining room door she suddenly realized that the reassurance must come from Andy. He seldom spoke of the past, save for a trivial incident now and then. She could ask him anything relative to the life they had shared together but nothing of other days. This was different. If only he would confide in her. A fierce desire to protect him caught at her heart. He might be in trouble.

To her relief Andy did not appear worried in the least. He had laid out the cards again, was studying them, with his head on one side, cigar stub at a grotesque angle in the corner of his mouth to keep the smoke out of his eyes.

"Has delight come to the old Idiot yet?" she asked, striving to adopt the bantering tone she often employed to match her father's puckish talk.

"Well, I've been able to restrain by exuberance at least," he admitted. "Had you met that fellow who was here just now? Thought I heard him call you by name out there." Andre did not look up.

"Why . . . yes. He came to see the doctor this afternoon. He had run a nail in his foot. Didn't you notice his limp?"

"Um. He's a bit lame, all right. What was the crack he made when he left? Maybe he's lame in the head, too."

Carol dropped into the chair where Dennison had sat. She rested her chin in her cupped hands and stared at the card layout with assumed interest. Still trying desperately to keep her voice level, indifferent. "I didn't get it," she decided. That much was true. She hadn't, at first. A new dismay gripped her. Andy's hearing was keen. He might repeat Mr. Dennison's words for her benefit. She ventured a question in return hoping to parry the danger.

"You'd met him, too?"

"Never laid eyes on him before."

"Oh . . ." Carol very nearly betrayed the comfort his words brought her.

"Trying to sell me a . . . proposition," Andy admitted. "Picked me for a sucker. I let him talk himself out. It's the best way."

"Oh," Carol said again. That might account for Mr. Dennison's call at the bank although the word "sucker" could never apply to the elderly dour president of the Jericho Savings. But it didn't account at all for the impatient gruffness in the visitor's voice. He couldn't be a very successful promoter.

"No luck." With a sweep of his hand Andy scattered the deck. "I'm going to bed, ducklet," and he pushed back his chair.

"Leave the cards there. I think I'll play one game. I don't feel sleepy somehow."

"Is it Wige and that moon?"

"Perhaps it is. I hadn't thought of it."

"Goodnight." Andy rumpled her hair gently as he passed behind her, leaving her to stare at the cards. Carol was trying to argue herself into a finding that everything was all right after all, but some vague disquiet persisted.

That feeling would have increased had she been an observer at that conference of two in the dining room, even though she might not have comprehended its details fully.

Dennison had helped himself to the chair his host indicated with a careless wave of a hand after the suggestion of a drink was dispensed with.

"I'll have a cigaret, if you don't mind. May I offer you one?"

"Don't use them," Andre returned. "But save your match. I'll light this butt again." He sucked it into action as his caller held out a flame. "Thank you, sir. Dennison, is it?"

"That's right. I'm with the Lawhead Corporation. That doesn't surprise you, I dare say."

"I make it a point never to be surprised at anything," Andre observed gently. "Should I make this an exception?"

"Look here, Delaine. I see you have your cards on the table and all face up. I'll do the same. So far as I've been able to learn you have no congressman or other government officials living around here. I'll admit I've no idea where the leak came from. It was to be expected under the circumstances . . . the way things have been managed, I mean. There is going to be a change in the program. Take my word for it."

"Isn't that a trifle vague? Considering your mention of cards?"

"I will diagram it if you insist. But I'm aware it isn't necessary. I . . ."

"Use that plate over there for your ashes. It won't hurt it."

"All right. We're rushing through a plant extension project to handle defense material. It was decided to bring it farther inland than our main works. A tract near here was decided on, too. I trust I'm not boring you with this familiar recitation." Dennison made no attempt to disguise a slight sneer in his voice.

"On the contrary, you interest me."

"Unfortunately, it is being privately built and operated. I say unfortunately because the government will finance and own it. We have to make the initial deals. Apparently you didn't meet our man who has been getting the options together. I'm sorry to say he slipped up . . . in a way."

"Yes?" Andre commenced gathering his cards in a pile. If there was anything significant in the move Dennison chose to ignore it.

"I was looking over the property today," he resumed. "There's a tract just north of the old canning factory and fronting on the railroad right of way, worthless for farming, scrubby. But it's the only piece that is level enough for a landing field without spending a lot of time and money. The old man who owns it was ready to let us have it on reasonable terms. But our option form must have stirred some chords of memory for he trotted out a copy of a prior option. Given a month ago . . . to you. For one dollar paid in hand and other valuable considerations. I saw it."

"Yes? Apparently all in due form?"

"So far as it goes. I know the answers, but it would be rather interesting to know why you picked up that piece just now . . . your version, I mean."

"Why not?" Andre cut the pack and shuffled the halves expertly. "I'm public spirited where Jericho is concerned. We've never had a commercial air field here. I admit toying with the idea."

"Bunk! I don't like to use the word chiseler, but it's the one that comes to mind."

"I'd rather you didn't. You invited yourself here, after all." Andre's blue eyes contracted slightly as they met his caller's with a cold stare. "What angle comes next in your order of business . . . legal or patriotic?"

"You're in the clear legally," was the grim admission. "But I hope you are going to be moderate. You may not be aware of it, but the government can institute condemnation proceedings, if you hold out for too big a take."

"But the government would hate to waste all that time just now," Delaine conjectured musingly.

"You think of everything, don't you? Well, you're right. This thing has to be pushed along. That's what I'm here for and I'm going to stick around for a time. We may as well get down to cases."

"You're authorized to make terms? You seem rather young. I mean that in a complimentary sense."

"Naturally. I dare say you have settled on some figure?"

"Oh, yes. A moderate one, I believe. Old Jeremy Rand and his wife have to be taken care of properly. I'll see to that. I would like to insure what future I have against want and I wish to leave something for my only child. She's sweet and deserving . . . but you have seen her.

"She's most charming."

"An odd notion, I dare say, Dennison." Andre stared down at his cards. "I've always wanted to say I had fifty thousand dollars . . . I don't know why just fifty and not seventy-five or a hundred. That's what I want for my land. Net, of course. Please don't overlook that 'net'."

"Why, that's . . ."

"Very reasonable, as you were about to say. Perhaps too reasonable. After all, a man of my age and years of work is entitled to a sum like that. Compare it to the national debt, for instance. Chicken feed, Dennison."

"Ridiculous!"

"I think not. It's the only figure I'm interested in at the moment but I'll listen to your charges and objections, if they're not too lengthy."

From that point on, young Dennison did most of the talking, explaining, arguing, almost threatening. The most lengthy rebuttal he achieved was a mild, "I'm afraid I wouldn't be interested."

When the sound of the front screen door announced Mrs. Steel's arrival, her brother started laying out his cards once more. He was still listening politely to his visitor, but there was something dismissive in the action.

"I'm off!" Dennison pushed back his chair and rose to his feet. "I'll swear, Delaine, I can't understand . . ."

The little man looked up with a disarming smile and said gently:

"Is it quite necessary that you should?"

It was two days after Dennison's call on Andre Delaine that Carol heard his name mentioned by Dr. Silverthorne.

"Seen your patient lately, Carol?"

"My patient?" She looked up in some surprise to find the doctor staring at her over the tops of his steel-framed lenses.

"The fellow with the nail poke . . . Dennison, wasn't it? I hear he's still at the hotel."

"Is he?" She did not think it necessary to admit that she had seen the young man driving along Front street, looking neither to the right nor left. That was yesterday.

"Uh-huh. Hope his foot's all right. Might do us some good."

"I don't understand."

Doctor Silverthorne regarded her quizzically, the fingers of his right hand tugging gently at his goatee. It was a habit of his. One that had caused Andy to remark: "Doc always appears to be milking for ideas."

"Then you haven't heard about . . . Dennison?"

"No, sir." Again that faint unrest at the sound of the name. Andy had contributed no further information, but many of Carol's waking hours had been spent in fruitless conjecture. She couldn't help it. Any more than she could the eager look that came into her brown eyes now.

"Some plane factory's moving here. There's been a lot of rumors. Seems this new man's some sort of an official . . . Here to start things. I reckon he has."

"Oh! That's marvelous!" Then Wige had been right, after all. "Will it be a large factory, Doctor?"

"More wild tales. From a hundred workmen to ten thousand. I don't know. And maybe they'll have their own doctor. If they don't, it shouldn't hurt me and our friend Rush. Both of us need some help, God knows."

"And think what it will do for the stores and . . . things!" Carol's practical mind leaped ahead. There was Andy. Perhaps he could afford an attractive shop. "Where do you suppose all the people will find places to stay? Where is the factory going to be?"

"Up the railroad a piece. The old canning factory's a part of the ground they tell me. Odd you hadn't heard. Town's buzzing with it."

Doctor Silverthorne was recalling Dennison's injury, that the stranger had asked him where he might find Andy Delaine. Queer for a fellow like him to be hunting Andy. Carol's face convinced him that she didn't know the answer, either.

"I hope it's true," she sighed. "I can't remember anything exciting ever happening here. It would be almost as good as living in a city."

DOCTORS PLAY VITAL ROLE IN CITIZEN ARMY

Many Left Private Practice To Assume Work Guarding Soldier Health.

(By Wide World)

CAMP BLANDING, Fla. — It isn't considered cricket in the ethics of the medical profession for doctors to call public attention to their own accomplishments, but there's nothing in the books about someone else doing it for them.

So this story has to do with the men who left their home town practices, doffed their white jackets for khaki, and became guardians of the army's health.

Just about a year ago a small medical unit arrived here to set up the first make-shift hospital. There were no buildings and only portable physical examination equipment. And then things began to move.

Today the Camp Blanding hospital, with 2000 beds, is the third largest in the south. Only the charity hospital at New Orleans and the army hospital at Fort Bragg, N. C., are larger. The wards, operating rooms, laboratories, clinics and offices are housed in 135 wooden buildings. The staff is composed of 130 medical officers, 179 nurses, 417 enlisted men and 334 civilians.

Since the hospital began operating, more than 21,000 patients have been admitted and there have been only six deaths from all diseases—pneumonia has been a negligible factor, accounting for two deaths.

These statistics emphasize the excellent job being done by the army's young medical officers.

Little is heard about this side of army life, because the excitement, color and romance lie in the sights and sounds of marching men, the roar of planes and tanks, the rumble of artillery and the dashing cavalry—not in the sickrooms and clinics.

But in a peacetime army as well as an army at war, the medics play an indispensable role and no one can minimize the importance of their work with the United States' new army.

Most of them are young reserve officers who were called into service when the army began its emergency expansion program. As a class, they probably have made greater personal sacrifices than any other single group answering the government's call.

Only a few years out of medical school, they were just beginning to establish themselves in their communities when orders came to report for active duty in the medical corps. Some were still paying the cost of their educations while most of them were starting to draw dividends on long years of study.

They said goodbye to their patients, turned their backs on hard-won practices and reported for duty with the realization that they probably wouldn't return to pick up civilian life again until the emergency had ended.

Hundreds of them came to the new army camps springing up throughout the south—places like Camp Blanding, a military city of 50,000 inhabitants which grew out of the piney-woods sand flats 40 miles from Jacksonville.

Now they're helping the army keep its manpower in good fighting trim and checking the health of each man discharged from service.

Recently the station hospital X-ray staff here took about 5,000 chest X-rays of selectees being released from service. These provide a permanent record on which long-range statistics on lung diseases may be based.

Also, the pictures may mean a large saving to the taxpayers in proving that chest diseases developed by soldiers after release were not service connected—thus eliminating the possibility of disability claims or admission to veterans' hospitals.

Since a good soldier rarely has bad feet, the medics try to see that each man's pedal troubles get special attention in an orthopedic clinic.

'JUNK MAN' HAILED AS KEY MAN IN DEFENSE PROGRAM

(By International News Service)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—The village "junk man," for many years just a convenience for the American householder, is likely to become a key man in the national preparedness program.

This was the prediction of Edward Steidle, dean of the School of Mineral Industries at the Pennsylvania State college, who pointed out that the rapidly decreasing supply of essential minerals has made it absolutely necessary to increase the collection of scrap.

"The search and conquest of minerals," Dean Steidle said, "can be traced in blood across the pages of history. Many wars have been waged to acquire mineral resources and it is not difficult to demonstrate that the irregular distribution of minerals on the earth's surface has been a powerful motivating force in the present war."

Dean Steidle said that the United States and Great Britain—nations which have always been rich in mineral resources and have not found it necessary to conserve these resources—are now turning to the world's greatest mine—the scrap heap.

In collecting scrap or secondary metal we have learned our lesson from the 'have not" countries who for 50 years have depended upon the salvaging of used materials to maintain their supply of minerals

"Nearly every mineral resource of the British Isles has passed over the peak," Dean Steidle said, "and the coal mines now extend under the sea. Iron ore becomes leaner every year, and the Cornish mines produce only 2,000 tons of tin per annum."

Pointing out that similar conditions also exist in this country he said that the native copper mines of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan are being abandoned and that similar deposits exist no other place in America. He also said that nearly half of the ores of the Mesabi range in Minnesota must now be concentrated to meet specifications.

Busy Beavers Save City Cost Of Building Dam

SALMON, Ida.—(INS)—The city of Salmon is enjoying the benefits of a new dam this summer—courtesy of a colony of beavers that was transplanted to a spot near the community two years ago.

Five of the busy animals were turned loose in Jesse creek in 1939 by the state game and fish commission. According to Virgil Harris, watermaster of the department, the beavers moved downstream to a spot within 100 feet of a site that had been surveyed for a reclamation dam.

The beavers then proceeded to build their own dam, thus saving the city the cost. Officials report that the beaver dam has stabilized flow of water in Jesse creek to such an extent that a steady supply of water has been provided for the city, precluding the necessity of building another reservoir.

BUSINESS GOOD BUT PROFITLESS

ST. LOUIS— (U.P.) —The insurance business is booming for two salesmen at Jefferson barracks—they sell $1,000,000 worth a day.

But there's a catch to it—they don't get commissions.

As members of the reception center of the barracks, Brown and Gibbs mention the fact that Uncle Sam is offering low cost insurance to selectees.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1941.

It's no wonder some folks are inclined to give up work if they can get a government job.

If there's to be no effective price ceiling taxpayers will soon be living on the anti-fat of the land.

A new manager has been hired for the Cleveland Indians—and there is quite general agreement that the Indians should be managed—if it can be done.

Self-Interest Blocks Price Control

THE EFFORT of congress to frame a price-control bill that will not offend any good-sized bloc of voters is resulting about as might be expected—an ineffective measure passed by the house four months after President Roosevelt asked congress to "act speedily" . . . and little prospect of anything better being accomplished by the senate.

Price control is subject to too many conflicting interests to make it an easy problem under any conditions but it becomes even more complicated when partisan and sectional politics plays such a prominent part as is now evidenced.

"Human nature" enters strongly into price control and, stated in simplest form, it appears that most people prefer to buy at a low price and sell at a high price.

Congress has thus far been attempting to establish price control without placing a "ceiling" on wages or farm prices, which seems obviously impossible as these two factors enter largely into production costs and living expenses.

Wage earners want prices kept down on things they buy, if this can be done by restricting profits and farm prices—but not by limiting wages.

Farmers are willing that wages should be kept within reasonable bounds and that industrial and business profits be limited by law, but want no top fixed for farm products.

Industrial firms and businessmen in general point to increasing wages, operating costs and high taxes, and are reluctant to have the government establish price limits without placing a ceiling on wages, which is frequently the most important item of cost.

Those who are uninfluenced by personal interest in price control, except as their own cost of living is affected, appear to be such a small minority that they count for little against the larger minorities which congress gives first consideration in working toward inoffensive price control legislation.

The outlook for a price control bill that will retard the present trend toward dangerous inflation is not bright.

Precautionary Health Examinations

FOR YEARS health authorities have urged thorough, periodic physical examinations. It is therefore discouraging to learn from army physicians that a large number of the drafted men whom they examine have never before had a complete physical check-up.

Many persons, for one reason or another, have at least one examination. College freshmen usually have a rather thorough going-over by the college physician or the family doctor. Applicants for life insurance must pass certain physical tests before they are accepted. Limited health examinations are required in some occupations and industrial plants.

Yet with all these opportunities, many Americans get by without expert scrutiny of their physical condition. What is wrong about that, someone asks. If they aren't sick enough to need a doctor why should they need a physical examination? For the reason, it is answered, that many serious ailments may be checked if they are caught early enough. And for the further reason that handicaps of which the victim often is unaware may be discovered and remedied as a result.

The army's experience with its recruits should be turned to good account nationally by reviving the campaign for a physical check-up for everybody.

Gambling Club Workers Organize

NEWEST of the "labor" troubles to come into the open is revealed by a Toledo date-lined dispatch to the Detroit News, which tells of the strike threat by recently unionized employes of the Club Devon, on the Ohio-Michigan border, described as the "biggest, most palatial and openest gambling joint within access of the metropolitan Detroit area."

In addition to a "closed shop" demand, there are matters of wages and hours involved in negotiations now going on between the company and members of the "independent union" made up of crap dealers, card dealers, blackboard men, horse bet writers, cashiers and croupiers employed by the Devon, which is termed an around-the-clock operation.

An unidentified spokesman is quoted: "After all, we work for a living, just like anybody else, and it's hard work too . . . sometimes we have to work 14 or more hours a day. We want that cut down to eight, or at most, ten, and we want a general wage increase of $2 a day. Most of the boys get only $8 a day now. . . . Another important item in our demands is a closed shop. Practically all the boys belong to the organization and we have to protect ourselves from outsiders. A written contract? Sure we are demanding a written contract. It all has to be legal and binding to be any good, doesn't it?"

Somewhere, lurking in the background of that story, there seems to be a moral for officials and law enforcement officers who appear to have trouble deciding where to draw the line on commercialized gambling.

'Serious Problem' of Bowl Games

WHAT is a "serious problem"? Probably it depends on what sort of thing you like best to worry about. For football fans recently it seems to have been the choice of teams for the Rose, Orange, Cotton, Sugar and Sun Bowl games that follow the collegiate football season.

The paucity of undefeated teams this year, a sports authority says, created a serious problem for the various bowl committees.

It's an odd season, it seems, when every team loses to somebody, although it is clearly impossible for every team to win all its games or lose them all. A season of tied scores would be a phenomenon as distasteful to the true football fan as to the players.

But football and bowl games aside, isn't it a wonderful country where, in the late autumn of 1941, this particular problem can be labeled "serious"?

According to Von Ribbentrop's latest sermon, Hitler did everything he could to avoid war—but the wicked democracies insisted on defending themselves.

CALIFORNIA, HERE WE COME!

Latin America Getting Impatient

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

UNCLE SAM'S civilians may howl to their heart's content over their inability to get lots of things that they want and are able to pay for but can't have because they simply aren't being produced in the face of defense and lease-lend requirements' monopoly of practically the country's whole industrial capacity. The pinch is beginning to be felt already, a few introductory howls are to be heard in response to it and they're bound to be louder and louder and more and more numerous.

It won't make much difference in the long run, though. The howlers will just have to wait and do their buying when the emergency's over. Probably they'll need to do a plenty of it and Yankee salesmanship will get the benefit of their trade as soon as it's again equipped to fill their orders.

Latin America's different, however.

Our southern neighbors show signs now of impatience at delay in the delivery of goods they have their applications in for with our exporters.

Several of their spokesmen made talks on the subject at a recent meeting of Pan American businessmen in this country. They said they thought it would be to our own advantage for them to express themselves plainly and warned us that we'll give them what they ask for when they ask for it, or, after the emergency, they'll be apt to turn elsewhere for the stuff they have to import or do without altogether.

Diplomatic information's to the same purport.

What the Latin Americas require is, of course, manufactures, notably-machinery. They produce raw materials of their own in tremendous quantities but are very shy on facilities for processing them.

And machinery naturally is exactly what our defense and lease-lending activities absorbs our entire output of.

Obvious Objective.

It also is precisely what countries like England and Germany can compete with us on, as soon as they get through fighting. It's a foregone conclusion that Latin American markets will be the immediate objectives that they'll concentrate on directly after peace's restoration, no matter which side wins. If, in the meantime, our neighbors have formed the habit of buying from us, we'll have 'em pretty well established as permanent customers. If not, it's strongly intimated that they'll be, not only willing to take what's available from anywhere, but maybe a trifle huffy in our direction for our present neglect of 'em.

We appear to take it for granted that they'll make emergency allowances, but they don't seem disposed to do so.

Perhaps it's an absolute impossibility for us to avail ourselves of this opportunity, but we've been told unmistakably by the Latins themselves that we're not considered to be behaving quite as Good Neighborly as we've professed to be.

Donald M. Nelson, OPM's priorities director, has suggested a plan for educating Yankee producers of civilian stuff to use substitute raw materials for their junk, so as not to be put out of business by defense's demands on the raw supplies to turn into military and naval essentials.

In Pan Americanism's interests it would pay him to conjure up some scheme for substituting the new world Latin's requirements—that is, if we want to hang onto their trade in perpetuity.

Seals Help In War On Tuberculosis

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE Christmas seals of the National Tuberculosis association are on sale now and it is urged that everyone buy as many of these as are needed to attach to their Christmas mailing envelopes. The money which is obtained from these sales is used in one of the greatest of all wars against one of the greatest and most ruthless of all enemies of mankind.

Winning the War.

No appeasement has been suggested nor can any thought of appeasement in this conflict be tolerated, because we are winning the war. The death rate from tuberculosis has been steadily declining since the year 1850. That year was the first in which reliable statistics were obtainable. In 1850 the death rate from tuberculosis was 500 per 100,000; in 1870 it was 410 per 100,000; in 1880 it was 310 per 100,000; in 1890 it was 320; in 1920 it was 112 and in 1940 it was 35 per 100,000, less than ten per cent of the rate of 1850.

Of course it was probably declining before 1850 and we can not assume that our active campaign against tuberculosis which only started in about 1900 is responsible for all of this decline. The great increase in the world's food supply and better nutrition are probably responsible for most of it. But if we take a period from 1860 to 1899 during which no active campaign against tuberculosis was in force, the death rate declined from 444 per 100,000 to 254—a decrease 33 per cent.

From 1900 to 1939, during which our campaign was in force, the drop was from 253 per 100,000 to 38 per 100,000—a decrease of 86%. So we must assume that the campaign itself is indeed having some effect.

The Campaign.

There are still about 500,000 patients with tuberculosis in the United States.

The campaign against tuberculosis in its first stages forty years ago was for better treatment for the already developed case. Today the emphasis has shifted to prevention and the battles are in two fields. First: to detect tuberculosis in childhood in its earliest stages and to treat tuberculosis so that a child with tuberculosis never develops the open adult form. Second: to weed out all the active cases of tuberculosis in the adult population, segregate them and prevent them from infecting other people.

How Infection Spreads.

One of the prime factors of the present campaign to prevent tuberculosis is to detect the adults in the household who have open cases and can spread the disease to children. This is not a pleasant subject and it is very repugnant naturally to mothers, fathers, grandparents, aunts, uncles and teachers to think that they are the source of the spread of tuberculosis. And yet almost without exception, tuberculosis is spread to another person by contact with an affected individual. The contact has to be fairly frequent and continuous. It usually occurs in childhood from kissing, using the same eating utensils, and being in a room where coughing and spitting out the tubercle bacilli goes on. In only a small number of cases is tuberculosis acquired by handling personal property such as books, handkerchiefs or the clothes of a person who has had tuberculosis.

Charge Pan-American Airways Is Favored as Result of 'Influence'

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It hasn't leaked outside the cabinet yet, but some of Mr. Roosevelt's cabineteers are putting up a fight against the navy for commandeering the one lone transatlantic plane which seeks to rival Pan-American Airways.

For years Pan-American Airways has had a 100 per cent monopoly on all foreign air routes from the United States. But last year the state department, postoffice and civil aeronautics board, agreeing that competition was the chief basis of the American system, granted American Export Lines a license to fly the Atlantic.

But now that American Export had just about completed building its first plane, a giant Sikorsky PBY, the navy has grabbed it. Meanwhile it has left untouched the 160 airplanes in the possession of Pan American Airways.

Most interesting thing about the navy's grab is that the navy's assistant secretary for air is Artemus Gates, formerly director of Pan American Airways. Also one of the navy's key officers in charge of long distance flying is Lt. Commander C. H. Shildauer, who for seven or eight years handled Pan American Airways operations in the Pacific.

Some of Secretary Knox's cabinet colleagues have remonstrated with him that it looked very bad for the navy to be seizing the property of Pan American Airway's rival when a former director of Pan American Airways was in charge of the seizure. Knox replied that he was convinced that Gates, who was president of the New York Trust Company, would be absolutely fair in the matter.

However, Postmaster General Walker, Secretary of State Hull, and Secretary Ickes all feel that the navy has been unfair in taking the one airplane of American Export and leaving untouched the 160 planes of Pan American.

Pan-American Digs In.

THIS incident has brought to the fore once again the manner in which the war emergency has entrenched monopoly in overseas air routes more than ever instead of getting back to the American principle of competition.

Another monopoly question which also has caused sparks to fly inside the cabinet is concerned with the Aluminum Corporation and the defense plants it is building for the government. Although RFCzar Jesse Jones' handling of these contracts has been criticized, it remains a fact that the plants he is financing remain the absolute property of the U. S. government.

However, Pan American Airways is now receiving $12,000,000 from the USA for building new or larger airports in Latin America. And when it finishes spending the government's $12,000,000, the new and improved airports will belong not to the government but in many cases to Pan American Airways. For Pan American owns many of the airports and is taking steps to secure a complete monopoly over others.

In Guatemala, for instance, the Pan Am representatives called on President Ubico some time ago and proposed improving Guatemala's chief airport, but on the basis that Pan American should be given exclusive rights to use it, and no other foreign company should come in for approximately 25 years.

To which President Ubico replied that he was well aware the U. S. war department was putting up the money for these improvements and Pan American Airways would get no exclusive rights.

In addition to the $12,000,000 for Latin America, Pan Am is getting a reputed $20,000,000 for developing new airports in Africa, and so far no safeguards have been set up to prevent these bases from becoming a monopoly.

Nazi Airlines In Brazil.

LATEST trouble which the state department has had with Pan American Airways is in Brazil, where for several years U. S. strategists have been worried over four Axis airlines operating there. These lines are:

1. The Italian Lati, which operates from Africa to Brazil and is the only regular connection between the Axis countries and Latin America.
2. Three German lines, Condor, Vasp and Varig which operate all over Brazil, including the vast jungle areas where all sorts of military activity could be carried out by airplanes without the knowledge of U. S. observers.

Brazil has been willing to oust the Germans, but has asked that substitute U. S.-Brazilian airlines first be organized to take their place. So the state department worked out an agreement by which Brazil would organize companies with American help and with funds from the RFC. To this end, the RFC has sent two representatives to Brazil, William Burden and William B. Harding, to make plans.

In each case, however, Juan Trippe, head of Pan Am and brother-in-law of Ed Stettinius, has used his persuasive influence on the RFC representatives. His argument was that he didn't want strong Brazilian lines built up out of the three German lines which would compete with his own local company, the PanAir of Brazil.

The Nazi lines still are flying over the vast areas of Brazil, even at a time when the U. S. army is so worried over this section of the world that it has moved troops into Dutch Guiana.

Will Defend New Orleans.

T SEMMES WALMSLEY, ex-mayor of New Orleans and foe of the Huey Long machine, is now serving as deputy director of civilian defense, under Mayor LaGuardia. He has this to say about defense of New Orleans:

"Nobody can defend that town! A couple of bombs would knock out the levees, and the city would be submerged with water. As for dug-outs, as soon as you start digging a hole in the ground, it fills up with water.

"But—if Hitler ever does come over, we've got some politicians who would steal his last pfennig and leave him without even a swastika!"

War Splinters.

THIS column recently revealed Intelligence reports of disrupted rail conditions in Germany, making it difficult to distribute the badly needed potato crop. This situation is getting worse. Eighty per cent of the potato crop had been harvested by November 1 but is still stymied. The remaining 20 per cent, unharvested, is in danger of being lost for lack of farm hands. . . . Rocket-propelled shells may soon give Allied artillery longer and deadlier fire power. The British have conducted successful experiments with them, particularly from airplane cannon. . . . Recently certain politicos noisily let off steam because of the removal of national guard and reserve officers found unfit to hold their commands. It was charged that they were being discriminated against in favor of "regulars." Yet a national guard officer is rated by the general staff as one of the top divisional commanders in the army. He is Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, commander of the 37th Division, made up of Ohio Guardsmen.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Answering the mail orders:

Corp. T. L., Camp Barkley, Tex.—The "air jeeps" will probably get their first real test in the Carolina maneuvers, but in preliminary tests the "grasshopper squadrons" of flixxer planes already have proved themselves in the Louisiana maneuvers. The planes cost about $3,000 each.

* * *

FINGER Print and Identification Magazine, Chicago — I stand corrected. President Roosevelt was fingerprinted soon after he took office and, according to the double check which I should have made in the first place, practically all members of the First Family now have done their finger exercises for the great file that is kept in the FBI.

* * *

M. N., San Antonio, Tex.—The army has released no figures on it but inside guesses are that a far greater number of selectees are enlisting in the regular army (for three years) than anyone suspects. Even before the army announced its plan to urge selectees to enlist for regular army service (so they may be subject to overseas duty) some camps were reporting that from 50 to 60 per cent of the selectees were coming in as regular army enlistees.

* * *

P. R. L., San Mateo, Calif.—The narrow margin on the house vote on revision of the Neutrality bill to allow U. S. ships to go into ports of warring countries (212 to 194) isn't considered here as any indication of disunity in the country. The non-interventionists, for example, have been claiming that 80 per cent of the people are against war or any steps that might lead to war. If this is such a step, as they argued, the almost 50-50 vote in the house would be far off. An overwhelming vote, say 80-20, or 70-30 vote against the administration foreign policy, would be a much greater indication of disunity. As I have explained before, there were many factors entering into the narrowness of this margin. In reality, however, it pretty much is following the pattern of congressional votes on highly controversial questions ever since the first congress assembled—they nearly always are close.

* * *

K. N., Alexandria, Va.—There's nothing to that report that conscientious objectors and persons who ask deferment under the draft will not get their government jobs back when their cases are settled, or peace has returned. The Civil Service Commission has ruled that this is up to the hiring agency and, all things being equal (that is, that investigation indicated that the selectee was sincere) it is probable that CSC would go to bat for the applicant for reinstatement.

* * *

W. L. C., Carthage, Ill.—There are 429 members of the house, at present, with six vacancies (an unusually low number of vacancies). There are no empty seats in the senate—the reason being that senators are appointed by the governors when vacancies occur through death or resignation. The theory behind this, I'm told, is that it is all right for a governor to appoint a senator, since he (the governor) also is state elected. The congressman must be elected because he represents a state district only—one that may be opposed to the governor's views.

Village Pastures

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WHENEVER I go in and out of our village, I pass the cow pastures where many villagers turn in their cows during summer and autumn months. Three fields are there, owned by two old men, whose father and grandfather cleared the land, in the beginning. For many decades they have used the straight-grained chestnut trees high up on the hill for hand split rails to repair the century-old fence.

Every morning an aged man leads out his favorite animal, and every evening at near dusk promptly returns to fetch her. He holds the rope in one hand, and his cane in the other.

Just across the smooth highway, at the corner of another field, two grade school boys haul feed up to their two cows each morning and evening—then sit on three-legged stools and milk while the docile creatures eat. These are only two families—several others likewise send milkers out to feed and milk the cows in a corner of the field.

I think I have never seen blue-grass grow thicker or remain greener than on these fields. They add a quiet, peaceful freshness to village atmosphere. The matted turf of roots cropped short as though it had been mowed.

Grass—the most persisent and the most important crop of all the earth! It is quick and sure to clothe and hide the wounds and agricultural mistakes of men. Where these fields were tilled, years ago, faint gullies show, but the grass has crept and covered and erased, and the turf grows thicker every year.

For the very fact is, that only as the grass grows green and well will our village and neighboring cities be content and prosperous.

On the towering hills just north of the village the timber has been cut and young shoots killed by grazing sheep and cattle. Yet, from that steep forest floor, like some timely messenger sent, the blue grass sprang up near the blackened stumps and between the maze of decaying surface roots. That was ten years ago. Now the turf is deep and green and defies the elements to wash away the good earth that it holds so intimately. The slope covers many acres and the owner does not overpasture. The crop of grass is far more convenient and of far more value for stock than adjacent, smoother cultivated fields.

Wants to Give Sister A Hope Chest

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
It is proper for a boy to give his sister a hope-chest as a birthday gift? Thank you for an early reply.
LOUIS.

A hope chest is usually given to an engaged girl for her linens and other treasured bits intended for her new home. I conclude your sister is engaged, but even if she is not, a lovely cedar chest would be an entirely proper gift to present to your sister. To collect linens is a delightful thing to do. It teaches girls to be fine needlewomen, and they're very convenient things to have when the right man comes along. Many European girls had this sort of a collection started when they were six or eight years of age.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
You couldn't find a happier home than ours was until my husband began to drink, four years ago. Under the influence of liquor, he becomes a homicidal maniac. The children are afraid of him and watch at the window for his coming. If they see him stagger, they run to a neighbor's house and beg to be taken in. He has lost two excellent jobs. We're all on the downgrade and he knows it.

The other night when he was sober he said to me, "I would give anything to be free from the curse of liquor, which is destroying us." Sometime ago I read in your column that all over the country there is a brotherhood which has for its aim helping victims of alcoholism. Will you be good enough to tell me something about it.
DISTRACTED.

Don't feel distracted any longer. You have the greatest possible help on your side. Your husband wants to be free of the slavery of alcoholism. That's the first step toward a complete cure, the willingness on his part to be healed, for, as we know, alcoholism is a disease.

Alcoholics Anonymous has accomplished miracles. Those who have not been benefited are people who delude themselves with sophistries such as "I can stop drinking when I want to." Send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, and I will put you in touch with the secretary of the organization. She asks that the names and telephone numbers of the various chapters be kept secret, and it seems to me the least we can do is to agree to her request, considering the splendid work the organization is doing.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
My girl friend and I have been going "steady" for two years, and she says she loves me. I know I love her too, but some of my friends have been telling me stories about her which I don't like to hear. When I ask her if these tales are true she denies them. We often quarrel over trivial matters. What do you think about my case?
SAM.

As long as you've asked me what I think I'm going to be unflattering and tell you I think you're a pretty poor sort of lover. You should be man enough not to listen to these rumors, or you should break off with her if you believe these rumors are true. You are neither loyal to her nor to yourself in listening to gossip.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, December 2.
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ALTHOUGH the planetary influences for this day are read as lucky, fortunate and propitious, yet there are factors pointing to the unique, exceptional unprecedented and unforeseen. It would seem as though all the finer faculties and forces were on the qui vive to accomplish something out of the ordinary or to indulge in experiences or adventures of strange or curious expression. The creative faculties should be highly stimulated, with imagination, inspiration, intuition as well as the distinctly emotional, social or affectional qualities inciting to dramatic performance. Business and personal matters flourish but there are obligations to assume and differences to compose, harmoniously.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an unusually thrilling year including adventure and curious experiences, with the keenly heightened forces and faculties seeking expression in drama, poetry, art, music or some form of imaginative, intuitive, mystical original or unique creative accomplishment. This may be lucrative, and attended by many social affectional and artistic gratifications. Both business and intimate affairs should thrive happily, but do not neglect obligations nor fail to harmonize potential disputes or regrets.

A child born on this day should be blessed with many rare talents and abilities, possibly in art, music, drama, poetry, or inventions or skills of exceptional merit. Its private life may be very absorbing and harmonious.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

My father's frigid voice, the rigidity of his face and the somber displeasure in his eyes told me that, in the language of my young son, I was "in for it, good and plenty."

I was anything but contrite, however, although the discipline of years and filial duty constrained my speech to apology. But I knew that I would not have missed the heady thrill of being of use in our crisis, which the last hour had given me, for a far heavier penalty than my father's displeasure, deeply as I knew that would weigh upon me.

"I am sorry to have disobeyed you, Father," I said quietly, "but I could not help it. You were going into danger. I felt that I must be near you. I intended to stay back by the stairs, if I were not needed, but when I saw the strong hands in those handcuffs—"

Admits Madge Helped.

"I am not disputing the value of the service you rendered," my father said, but there was no abating of the chill in his voice. "You saved a melee, in giving me that warning; a melee in which someone might have been hurt. That was the only danger. The man was not armed, and there were plenty of men to take care of him. But if he had caught sight of you and been able to swing you in front of him, he might have escaped, and you might have been—"

I knew better than to protest. "But my warning saved all that." Instead I kept a discreet silence, and my father went on.

"It was too great a risk," he said, and I knew that the slight unsteadiness in his voice was caused by his vision of what might have happened to me. "And there is something else involved."

Faces Scathing Rebuke.

His voice was icily judicial, now, and I braced myself to hear scathing words.

"I have been glad and proud to have your aid in my cases, Margaret," he said. "You always heretofore have been obedient, co-operative and most helpful. Twice in the last few days I have overlooked your running into danger, have dismissed it with a quip that you ought to be shot at sunrise or some such nonsense, but there were two reasons for my leniency."

What was coming, I wondered dully, then realized poignantly what his punishment would be.

"The first reason," he said, "was that the results of your foolhardiness were so helpful to this enterprise.

"But the second—and the more important of the two was that heretofore I had given you no orders, and you disobeyed no mandate of mine. I have accorded you equal rank with Dicky, Harry and Lillian on my list of aids. Unless I specifically pointed out otherwise, you were always privileged to use your own judgment."

Might Be Dismissed.

With my spurts rapidly descending to the toes of my shoes, I realized that he was speaking in the past tense, as if I no longer were an aid of his.

"In this work of mine," he went on "as in the army, obedience to orders is vital. There can be but one head. Mine must be the final word as I must shoulder all responsibility. There must be no disobedience."

He paused for a long second, looking off into space, while I felt as if I were suspended somewhere between sky and earth, unable to rise or to descend.

"I have two alternatives," he said at last. "I can dismiss you from my service and request that you go home immediately. I do not deny that such a course would hamper my work immeasurably, for I am depending you for many angles of this case. But it is what I ought to do, what I would do were you almost anyone else."

Demands Her Word of Honor.

I broke into impassioned speech at that.

"You must not let the fact that I am your daughter interfere with your judgment," I cried.

He turned cold, judicial eyes upon me in silent reproof at my outburst.

"The fact that you are my daughter has nothing to do with the case," he said. "What I mean is this—"

He paused, I knew to give his words more emphasis, then went on.

"I know you so well that I know if you give me your word not to disobey me again, I can rely upon it, and we can go on as if nothing had happened. Can you give me that word of honor?"

Snappy Carriage Rings Fashion Bells

If a woman will devote fifteen minutes each day to a few simple exercises she will never have to worry about the middle-aged figure catching up with her. Women need exercise as much as men do. The man whose muscles are soft and flabby, who leads an easy settled life, is the contempt of his fellows. It can be said in safety that few women stick to exercises after they have started them. They're too busy, or they forget. But they will rue their neglect. Slack muscles destroy youthful outline. The bulge appears below the belt, the back and shoulders thicken. There's plenty of time to be found for complexion tinting and hair curling. Why not a few minutes for the preservation of sound musculature?

There is the important matter of posture. Posture is not something you get by kicking your heels in the air or swinging your arms. It originates in the mind, the body will respond. It is the desire to assume an attitude of courage, spirit and zest. The rest is habit. Feel alive, on your toes. Don't slump or slink. The slumper and the slinker are the failures among the sisters, because erect carriage gives style and manner to the simplest attire and they haven't got it.

We offer some suggestion for figure molding.

When picking up an object from the floor when tying a shoelace bend at the hips, not at the waistline. Hips are natural things. When you bend at the hips the abdominal muscles tighten that tightening movement keeps them strong. The bend at the waist thrusts the fibers forward, relaxing them, and forces the flesh up in a roll under the bust. Make a habit of hip bending, if you would retain the slim waist line and the flattened tummy.

Treat your backbone with respect, make it operate as nature intended. Posture is dependent upon the vital pose of the spinal column. There is a pleasing inward curve at the back of the waist that must be maintained if the silhouette is to be attractive. Lose that curve and the shoulders fall forward, the chest contracts.

Be ever conscious of the fact that, when the body is extended, pulled up full height, there is resiliency of muscles and ease of movement. Graceful motions produce less fatigue than slouchy ones, because nature intended us to move gracefully, as do most of the animals.

The relaxed spinal column interferes with normal breathing, weakens the lungs and causes firm breasts to soften. It is responsible for many a little shelf below the belt that ruins the appearance of the prettiest frock.

It is a crying shame that every girl and woman, no matter what her age may be, does not keep in mind the need of walking, sitting, standing beautifull.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE PERFECT SHUFFLE

Did you ever see a perfect shuffle? It would be one which mixed the cards so thoroughly that the ensuing deal was not affected in the slighted by the way the cards were arranged before the shuffle. In other words the original pattern of the cards would be completely destroyed, and the new pattern would be one which bore no relation whatsoever to it.

No, there has never been an absolutely perfect shuffle. There are imperfections in even the best shufflers' methods. The fellow who makes the cards sing with his graceful riffling is one of the worst shufflers of all. For his precisely mechanical work can, after an even number of riffles, almost restore the original arrangement.

The awkward shuffler, who clumsily shifts the cards of his right hand among those in his left, and repeats the process several times, does a better job. He does not cause a more or less fixed formula to operate, but makes something different occur each time.

None of the best shufflers, however, can break up every combination of adjacent cards. After the shuffle, there will always be some cases of two cards, originally next to each other, still being that way.

We all know that frequently somebody plays an ace on the other fellow's king, whereas seldom does a king get played immediately on an ace. Likewise, a king often covers a queen, a queen covers a jack, and a jack covers a ten, the reverse being rare.

So, if any such pair of honors is not destroyed in the shuffle, the deal will allot the lower honor to one player and the higher one to the opponent at his left, who gets the next card.

That is why, in rubber bridge, an ace is more likely to be to the left of a king, a king to the left of a queen, and so on, than is the contrary arrangement. Consequently the mathematics of probabilities can be upset by this factor, and it should be considered somewhat in many very close problems of bidding and play.

This does not apply at all to duplicate, however, as in that game two honors, even if played consecutively, are not picked up as part of a single trick, but are restored ultimately to the separate pockets of the duplicate board from which they were taken at the start of the hand. So when those cards are removed, for a shuffle at the start of another duplicate contest, the consecutively-played honors are not together, but at places distant from each other in the deck.

Stubborn Child Fault Of Parents

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

There would be practically no stubborn children if their parents did not make them so. Stubbornness usually is greatest from the ages 2 to 6, and especially from 3 to 5.

During this period, conscientious parents wishing to train the child in obedience will, unawares, cultivate strong stubbornness in him.

Different Cases.

Their error is easily located. They suppose they can, by means of punishment, make the child do what they want him to do as well as keep him from doing what they don't want him to do. Accordingly they will, for example, tell the tot to close the door or to stop tormenting the cat. While effective punishment easily will keep this child from tormenting the cat, no amount of it may make him choose to close the door.

The two cases are as different as day from night. They should merely have asked the tot to close the door and let him choose. Since he was merely requested, there could be no occasion to punish him if he chose not to close it. But if they were skilful, the child would choose to close it or, failing this time, would do it next time, no doubt. They would help him to get satisfaction from his cooperation.

Make Requests Pleasant.

Make pleasant what you want the child to do and painful only what you want him never to do. If this principle had been observed in the case about to be presented, the tragedy would never have occurred. Of a four-year-old girl her mother writes:

"I would like your advice as to how to correct her stubborn disposition. On several occasions, when Martha has mispronounced a word or phrase either I or her stepdaddy have corrected her and had her repeat it correctly after us.

"Then we want her to say it herself without any help several times. She will say it correctly once and then say it wrong. She knows she is doing it wrong because when we ask her why she doesn't say it right she simply says 'I don't want to.' Her daddy is then determined she will say it correctly before she can do anything else. He promises her a spanking if she doesn't say it like a big girl; then she'll say it right once but immediately will repeat it wrong again. We will spend from half hour to an hour trying to get her to say some simple word or phrase correctly two times in succession."

Try Steaming Fish for a Change

By BETSY NEWMAN

Each cook has her own particular way of cooking fish. There are the fried fish addicts, those who insist a baked fish is the only proper way to serve, and the broiled and boiled fish advocates. Try steaming for a change. I'll give you a recipe.

Today's Menu.

Steamed Fish
French Fried Potatoes
Cauliflower
Molded Tomato Salad
Apple Dumplings in Maple Syrup
Coffee

Steamed Fish.

One or two pounds fish steaks or fillets, or 1½ or 3 pounds whole fish; salt solution; cream dressing or seasoned butter dressing.

Cover fish with salt solution which should be made in proportion of 2 tablespoons salt to 1 cup cold water, allowing it to stand from 2 to 8 minutes, depending upon the thickness and variety of the fish. Drain, place fish 1 layer deep in well oiled steamer and cook from 5 to 12 minutes, or until tender. Serve with cream sauce or seasoned butter dressing. If you use a cream sauce, make ordinary white sauce with plenty of butter, then add chopped parsley just before serving. Serve over fish with lemon on the side, or serve sauce in separate dish with lemon with the fish. For the butter sauce, try Maitre D'Hotel sauce.

Maitre D'Hotel Sauce.

One-half cup butter; 10 drops onion juice; 3 tablespoon lemon juice; 1 tablespoon chopped parsley; salt and pepper.

Beat butter to a cream, as for cake, add lemon juice a little at a time, and, when well blended, stir in the parsley, onion juice and seasoning. Form into a ball or flat cake and set aside to chill before serving.

Apple Dumplings In Maple Syrup.

One and one-half cups flour; 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt; 1 tablespoon sugar; 3 tablespoons fat; approximately ½ cup milk; maple syrup; ¼ cup sugar; 1 tablespoon butter or margarine; 4 apples.

Sift flour, measure and sift with baking powder, salt and sugar, work in fat with pastry blender or the tips of the fingers, add milk to make a soft dough. Roll out to ⅛ inch thickness and cut into 4 rounds or squares. Pare and core apples, roll each in maple syrup and place in center of pastry round. Fill center with sugar, dot with butter, bring ends of pastry together. Place in small greased baking dish, pour additional syrup over dumplings to come well up on them. Bake in moderately hot over (375 degrees F.) from 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with syrup poured over them, with cream, if liked.

GEN. JOHNSON:

WASHINGTON — The assignment of Brig. Gen. Breton Somervell as G-4 of the whole army passed with very little notice. Perhaps it is just as well. It is a lot better to save the plaudits for the end of the chapter than to get the red fire first and the dead cats last. I ought to know. The latter is the way it happened in the NRA.

Johnson

On reason for the lack of public attention is the peculiar way of naming the very biggest of army jobs. "G-4" means the division of the general staff which is charged with the procurement, storage, transportation and delivery of all supplies of every kind for the land forces and for much construction Considering the magnitude of the production program, it is about the biggest job of its kind in the world.

The World war general staff of our army didn't use the "G" nomenclature on this side of the Atlantic. It was copied in the A. E. F. from the British system but the matter of names was of small moment. Our G-4 in America was called the division of purchase, supply and traffic. General Goethals was in charge of all three. My own general staff assignment was that of purchase and supply and hence was about two-thirds what Somervell is undertaking His is like Goethals'.

I mention all this as a little preface to show that I know something about its nature

I also know something about Somervell. He succeeded me as administrator of WPA in New York City Just before that, he attracted the attention of the president by his work in planning and construction of the Florida ship canal. He got his orders one morning and before Congress could get around to stopping the project he had that great ditch well along in construction in a matter of a few weeks.

His work on WPA in New York City was equally remarkable. We hastily put 220,000 men to work in about 6 weeks before he arrived, but it was naturally a helter-skelter sort of a job. He organized that effort so that toward the end it was nearly the equivalent of civilian engineering projects.

Since that time, and during his constantly increasing war responsibilities, his record has shown no downward dip. In short what we have here is one of the first proved shining lights of our top-side army command. If I am any judge, he will do one of the outstanding jobs in its class of any nation in the war.

Of even more significance is the wholly healthy tendency shown by this appointment and the concentration of all construction work in the engineer corps.

We are moving towards centralization of power in the ablest hands and with the most direct responsibilities. Considering the terrible confusion, overlapping, ineptitude and uncertainties of authority in so many of the other government efforts this is highly encouraging.

Somervell will dig no more ditches like the Florida ship canal but will see that they are dug in the best and most economical manner possible. That kind of thing is not the 1-100th part of the things for which he will be responsible He must see that the army is clothed, fed, housed and moved better than any other army in the world I wouldn't know how to pick a better man.

House Set to Debate Anti-Strike Bills

OPM OFFICIALS HINT LIMIT ON AUTO MODELS

See Possibility of Only Two Types, Elimination of Finery, Gadgets.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Defense officials said today that demands for materials in the armament program may require the automobile industry to produce only two and four-door sedans without brightwork, wool upholstery, rubber floor mats and other unnecessary gadgets and peace-time finery.

An industry-OPM decision to produce only two and four-door sedans would eliminate from the civilian new car market for the duration of the emergency station wagons, limousines, town cars, roadsters, coupes and convertible models.

OPM officials declined to predict what the future, emergency "victory" model automobile will look like because of changing defense demands.

But these possibilities are known to be under consideration:

Production of only standard cars in each line

Elimination of double-bar bumpers and bumper guards.

Substitution of wool and rubber floor mats in favor of linoleum, imitation leather and other substitute materials.

Substitution of steel for copper in radiators.

Elimination of all unnecessary gadgets such as clocks, cigar lighters, radios, dual tail lights and extra horns.

Reduction in the number of colors and the number of coats of paint or enamel on each car.

These were some of the suggestions recently given the industry for "study" by the OPM—chiefly on the recommendation of the office of price administration's consumer division No specific moves have been made toward their immediate adoption

It is possible high defense officials say, that the time may come when prospective buyers would be given a priority depending on their need for a new car

Up and Down THE STREET

The sight of firemen rushing to a fire is a common sight but persons walking to work this morning witnessed the unusual spectacle of a motorist bringing his fire to the fire station to be extinguished. Forrest A. Cleland, Mansfield salesman, while driving to work this morning pushed in the automatic cigar lighter on the dashboard. The lighter became stuck, however, and could not be withdrawn. When clouds of smoke began rising from the auto dashboard, Cleland rushed over to the central fire station where firemen removed the heating coil, checking the fire.

CIO FIGHTS TO HOLD OFF 'REPRESSION'

Three Measures Proposed In Lower Chamber; Senate Gets Seizure Plan.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The house is expected to begin debate today on several proposals to curb strikes in defense industries and may pass, with White House approval, some form of restrictive legislation before the end of the week.

At the same time the Congress of Industrial Organizations seeks to use its influence to prevent enactment of "repressive" legislation CIO President Philip Murray issued a call last week for representatives of all national and international CIO unions to be here today "to discuss and take whatever action is necessary."

The parliamentary situation with respect to labor legislation in the house is complicated by the fact that there are three bills ready for action, each of which has a strong supporting bloc. Industry and labor are together in opposing proposals for compulsory arbitration.

The administration apparently is supporting the proposal of the house labor committee for voluntary mediation of disputes with government seizure of plants in those that cannot be settled. President Roosevelt has been informally committed by his congressional leaders to such a program.

Mediators — representing management, labor and the public— would be empowered to order a 60-day cooling off period during which strikes could not be called by labor leaders but the right of an individual employe to strike would not be infringed The cooling off period would be enforceable by court order.

Two other strong house blocs will offer more drastic proposals, both of which probably will be voted upon during the week.

The senate plans to consider Thursday a bill by Sen. Tom Connally, D., Tex., to authorize federal seizure and operation of strike bound defense plants. It would freeze all working conditions, except wages, in the plants after they are taken over.

Industry, through President Albert W. Hawkes of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, called upon congress last night to deny the government the right to seize plants such as contemplated under the house labor committee bill Instead, Hawkes urged in a statement that congress adopt as the principal provision of any labor legislation a prohibition against extension of the closed shop, contending that the constitution guarantees a man the right to work.

It appeared likely that labor legislation would be the last major work of this session of congress. Senate action on the house-approved price control bill probably will be postponed until January.

CITIZENS NATIONAL BANK HAS ITS 60TH ANNIVERSARY TODAY

The Citizens National Bank and Trust company, Mansfield's oldest national bank, observed its 60th anniversary today without ceremonies.

Founded Dec. 1, 1881, the bank was granted trust powers May 24, 1926, when it adopted its present title. Officials said it was the city's first financial institution to receive a national bank charter. Mansfield had other state banks, however, before it was founded

The late S. A. Jennings was one of the founders of the 60-year-old bank and was affiliated with the institution for a number of years He died about two years ago.

Only three men have headed the bank since it was organized, G F. Carpenter was its first president. His son, Reid Carpenter, succeeded him J A. Rigby who died last June became president of the institution in January, 1918, and held the position until his death

The bank presidency is vacant now, but officials said a new president will be chosen at the annual directors' meeting the second Tuesday in January.

Cashier C W. Fuchs is the bank's oldest employe. He came with the institution 40 years ago. There are 19 employes in the bank besides the officers

"We think our institution has a pretty good record," Fuchs commented today. "Starting with almost nothing, it now has assets of more than $625,000 and has never missed paying a dividend."

PLANES TO ROLL FROM OHIO LINE NEXT THURSDAY

Curtiss-Wright Plant at Columbus Ready to Go Into Production.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Two lines of planes for Uncle Sam's navy soon will be streaming through the great, yawning doors of the Curtiss-Wright aircraft plant at Port Columbus.

Each type of plane is reported more powerful than any similar plane in the world. The "Helldiver" is a dive bomber; the "Seagull" is a scout observation plane, to stalk enemy submarines and surface craft.

The first "Seagull" has been completed and will roll out of the plant at dedication next Thursday, just 319 days after ground first was broken for the $14,000,000 plant.

"Tooling-up" of the factory is progressing rapidly. There are 3,700 men at work and 13,000 will be employed by next October when full production is reached. Peak production of the "Seagull" will be reached next May.

The Columbus division is one of four Curtiss-Wright units making planes. Two at Buffalo, N. Y., make P40 pursuit ships, 052 observation planes and C46 twin-engined transports for the army. At Saint Louis a plant turns out C46 transports and AT-9 twin-engined advanced trainers for the army and SNC-1 navy trainers.

Six other Curtiss plants make engines and five plants make propellers.

The Columbus division, a great building of yellow brick and blue-tinted glass, sprawls over 25 acres at the southwest corner of Port Columbus. Most of the plant is one huge room at ground level, where fabrication takes place. Twenty-six football fields could be laid out on the floor of the production room. The ceiling is 400 feet high over the 600 by 400 foot assembly floor at the east end—high enough to clear a three-story house. Completed planes will move through two doors 225 feet wide onto the field for flight tests and delivery to cruisers, battleships and aircraft carriers.

Offices, drafting rooms and service quarters are grouped along one side of the building. A cafeteria seating 1,400 persons, locker and storage rooms, and a first aid clinic with a complete operating room and x-ray equipment are in the basement.

The structure is lighted throughout by more than 10 miles of fluorescent tubing. A public address system carries messages through 120 speakers to all parts of the plant.

An impressively large section of the plant makes things which never appear in the finished plane. Every part must be completely interchangeable with the same part on a sister plane. This requires extreme accuracy in every operation, sometimes within limits as narrow as one-ten-thousandth of an inch.

THE OLD MAN AND THE BABIES

Chapter One

MANY years ago in the City of the Seven Castles there was a great dance festival on the first Monday of September. King Harald had invited everyone to come. They streamed into the city even before the round, red sun rose above the trees.

There was much laughing as old friends met. And there was much bustle in the squares because everyone had brought something to sell. The men brought pigs and wheat. The women brought quilts, lace and cakes. Small boys and girls sold chestnuts and pigeons.

That noon King Harald promised a feast on the lawn of the White Castle, and that evening he was sending his musicians to play beside the wishing well in the little, green square behind the cathedral.

I shall tell you about a strange old man who came. He walked in alone from the North. He wore a white jacket, and he leaned on a staff. His feet were bare and the wind blew his silky, white hair. He had nothing to sell.

He went straight to the wishing well and laid down his staff. He drew a bucket of water, took a kerchief from his neck and wet it, and then he wiped his feet as if they were tired.

He smiled at some boys but they looked away and whispered. Then one lad sneaked around him, stole his staff and limped around in such good imitation of the old man that everyone laughed.

The boy thought he was very clever so when he gave the staff back he poked the old man in the ribs. But as he did so a queer thing happened: green leaves sprung from the staff.

The boy turned and ran, and the merchants nearest the old man moved farther away. So the old man took his staff and walked on. He went to the great square where men and women were already dancing and stopped beside two men who were drinking wine from a pigskin sack. He said, "I'm very thirsty."

"Ho, ho," laughed one man, "dust wouldn't be good for that would it?" That made the other man laugh. A woman chuckled and offered the old man a dry biscuit. He walked on.

Now this City of the Seven Castles was the capital of a rich country. There had been no war for a hundred years, so the wheat fields were rich, the orchards large, and even the beggars ate roast goose on Christmas eve.

This day, as the sun set, the people spread out picnic feasts they had brought in woven hampers. But the old man had nothing to eat. He stopped by a plump housewife and asked if he might have a piece of cold roast goose. She looked annoyed and said, "Beggars can't be choosers." She threw him some scraps.

Again the old man walked on and a queer thing happened. White doves flew out from his robe and circled over his head. That frightened everyone who saw it. The oldest and wisest grandmother there exclaimed. "Sh-sh! This is no beggar."

At that the old man stepped up to her and said, "No, I am no beggar. I am come from the North Pole to see how men and women use their riches."

The grandmother asked, "What do you find?"

The man said nothing, but he reached down to a bouquet of flowers, chose a white rose, drew a knife from his belt and cut the rose in half. His lips moved but no one heard what he said. Suddenly the rose was gone, and in his arms snuggled two new-born babies, one a girl, and the other a boy. Then the old man turned and walked out of town.

Marion Lecture Club Presents Program at Senior High School.

GALION — Music lovers in Galion, a small but very appreciative audience, heard a splendid program Sunday afternoon at Senior High school auditorium, given by the Lecture-Recital club of Marion. This was another in the series of programs sponsored by Bessie Todd.

Applauded again and again was the chorus of some 55 voices under the direction of L. G. Jones, appearing at the conclusion of the program to sing five numbers. Mrs. Jean Ebert was the accompanist.

The program opened with an organ and piano duo, composed of Mrs. Harry T. Williams, organist, and Mrs. O. D. Anderson, pianist, who played "Grand Aria," Demarest. Three selections were sung by Mrs. Earl N. Hale, contralto, who had Mrs. Harold K. Mouser for her accompanist.

In the absence of the instrumental trio which had been scheduled to play on the program, Mrs. Mouser appeared for two piano solo numbers.

After Tschaikowsky's "Theme From Concerto In B Flat Minor" was played by Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Anderson, the chorus appeared as the final feature, singing five numbers.

Story From Life.

"One Foot In Heaven," the absorbing story of a country minister now showing at the Ohio, is based on the life of Rev. William H. Spencer who was too busy working for his flock to make a bid for history's pages. His son, Hartzell Spencer, however turned out to be a writer and he has captured his father's story between the folds of a book that in turn furnished the screen with one of its most delightful documents of family life. The Iowa preacher will not see his story but his wife spent considerable time on the studio sets watching the picture made. Her role on the screen is enacted by Martha Scott while the minister's part is portrayed by Fredric March. Beulah Bondi and Gene Lockhart are also in the cast.

Gay Comedy.

Schools Using Newspaper Comics To Help Teaching

An increasing number of educators are taking advantage of the natural interest of children in newspaper comics, to use the comics as teaching aids. In Lowell, Mass., and other cities, comic sections are used as texts. New text books are now being prepared in the form of cartoon strips; they have already been tried out in New York City. In Shaker Heights, O., children are given an opportunity to see popular comic artists at work. At left, students at Lomond school there, are watching a demonstration by Bela Zaboly, who collaborates with Tom Sims in carrying on the famous Thimble Theater Starring Popeye strip. At right, Mr. Zaboly is showing a pupil how to draw Popeye.

Joe Romano, Duke Weber Make AP All-Ohio Eleven

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

There'll be a lot of surprised people in Mansfield and the immediate vicinity, including such points as Sandusky, Elyria, Springfield, Warren, Massillon, Canton, etc., etc., and etc., when they read the AP's All-Ohio high school gridiron selections.

"What happened," they'll ask, "to such guys as Harris, the Canton McKinley fullback; Weisgarber and Paulick, the Massillon tackles; Smith, the Newark end; Laubie, the Shelby backfield bolt; Marsh, the Elyria marauder; Brooks Lawrence, the Springfield fly-killing forward passer; Holt, the Massillon fullback; Benedetto, the Dennison demon; the Wright twins from Mt. Vernon; Hall and Wisbon, the Fremont furies; Scarpacci, the Warren wonder, etc., etc., and also etc.?

"Why," they'll ask, "weren't some of those boys given at least honorable mention?"

Don't blame the AP for that. The AP acts merely as an election board in this matter of selecting an all-star, all-Ohio, all-high school grid team.

So long as there are more small schools in the state of Ohio than there are big schools, so long as there are more coaches of small teams thar there are of big teams, just so long will there be more votes in there for players from small schools than there will be from big schools.

And there'll be more votes to count from the small leagues and the small unofficial circuits than there will from the big schools and the big time football.

As a matter of fact, there is no true yardstick for measuring football greatness, whether you are picking all-county high school, or all-America college, or coach of the year, or this century's most darling great-grandmother of gridiron greats. It's a grab-bag any way you look at it.

We in Mansfield have no kick coming on this year's AP All-Ohio — two men on the first team, one on the second, and represented at every position on the team, except halfback, on the complete choices from first team through honorable mention. And with eight boys mentioned out of a fairly well stabilized starting eleven!

For the first time in four years, Mansfield has an All-Ohio star, the first All-Ohio star since Johnny Hallabrin was picked at fullback in 1937. And before Johnny there was Gaylord Bucher at guard for two straight years in 1935 and '36.

And for the first time in history Mansfield has two boys picked in the same year for the AP all-Ohio, Joe Romano and Duke Weber. No, we have no kick coming, even though you and I might pick a different all-Ohio team.

Personally I think Paul Dietzel rates first team selection. I think Ken Smith and Ed Arlin rate better than honorable mention. And I think Harris of Canton McKinley, and Holt of Massillon rate up in there some place. And I believe Adam Brandt would have been a hot shot to finish up higher if he hadn't been injured in that Massillon game.

* * *

But this is all a matter of personal opinion. You and I didn't see Martins Ferry, or Middletown, or Warren, or Toledo Libbey, or Portsmouth East, and some of the other good teams. So let's call it a day and be happy.

Bears Can Tie Loop Leaders

Need Win Over Cards To Tie Green Bay Team.

CHICAGO —(AP)— The Chicago Bears, needing only one victory to tie the Green Bay Packers for the western title of the National football league, will have as their final opponent Sunday the fourth-place Chicago Cardinals.

The Bears must win to deadlock the Packers and force a playoff Dec. 14 for the western division crown. The winner would meet the New York Giants, eastern titlist, for the league championship Dec. 21.

But if the Bears should lose to the Cardinals, the Packers would take an undisputed western title and would play the New Yorkers for the championship Dec. 14.

The Packers assured themselves of at least a tie yesterday by defeating the fading Washington Redskins, 22-17. The Bears rolled over the Philadelphia Eagles, 49-14.

The Brooklyn Dodgers clinched a tie for second place in the eastern division by slugging the Pittsburgh Steelers, 35-7.

The Cardinals, who will be gunning for an upset win over the Bears, lost yesterday to the Detroit Lions, 21-3, and yielded third place in the west to the Lions. The New York Giants were idle. Cleveland ended its season a week ago.

Standings:

Cleveland	2	9	0

Coaches Boost Star Choices

Snyder Tells Why His Gridders Rate Posts.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Here's what the coaches of the 11 stars named to the all-Ohio high school football team had to say about their boys:

* * *

Romano, Mansfield: Superb defensively, a fine blocker, and the key receiver in our pass offense.

* * *

Lewis, Akron East: State heavyweight wrestling champion, all-Akron tackle three years, outstanding star of mediocre team.

Hill, Massillon: Excelled as interference leader and on defense the best.

Wright, Bexley: Faultless passer, sterling defensive player and vicious tackler.

Weber, Mansfield: Speed to burn, along with all other attributes of a great lineman.

Groza, Martins Ferry: Made at least half the tackles, doubled as pass receiver, blocked several punts, and captained team which won 10 and tied one.

Bean, Springfield: Ideal weak side end, good pass receiver, speedy ball carrier and outstanding blocker and tackler. Plenty of strength and stamina—pole vaults 13 feet 3 inches, and runs 220-yard dash and hurdles.

Phillips, Berea: Most outstanding player seen in Ohio in seven years. Has no weakness, but possesses all the strong points. A natural.

Wolfe, Upper Sandusky: A marked man all year, but never stopped. Quick thinker, fast, elusive, and could kick and pass with the best. Scored 139 points.

Blunt, Massillon: Captain of Tigers, unbeaten since 1937; hard, shifty runner who scored 84 points against state's toughest teams.

Pumphrey, Cincinnati Withrow: Had everything. Punting average close to 50 yards, fine pass receiver, blocker and plunger. Outstanding place-kicker, scored 73 points.

Eight Tygers Named In Star Selections

Bill Doolittle Picked On Second Team of Wire-Service Eleven.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Tom Phillips, 17-year-old pass-throwing, place-kicking ace of Berea, ascended the throne today as Ohio's No. 1 high school football player, the scintillating triple-threater dominating the balloting by a "country mile" as the Associated Press selected its 1941 All-State scholastic squad. Accepted as official by the Ohio High School Football Coaches' Association, the all-star team was a "dream" combination. Speed scoring ability, smartness, defensive strength and love of contact were attributes of all the first-stringers.

Massillon's mighty Tigers, claimants of the state title the last seven years, won two first-string positions, as did Mansfield's surprising Tygers, who battled the Stark county powerhouse to a 6-6 tie.

Other positions went to Akron East, Bexley, Martins Ferry, Springfield, Upper Sanedusky and Cincinnati Withrow. Only two of the players, Center Bob Wright of Bexley and Tackle Lou Groza of Martins Ferry were over the 200-pound mark, as the voters placed an accent on speed and maneuverability.

Extreme height, too, was tossed aside as a requisite, as only two—Groza and End Elmer Bean of Springfield—topped the six-foot elevation. The weights ranged from Wright's 214 pounds to the 156 boasted by Mansfield's "Mighty Mite" guard, John Weber, while Massillon's star backfielder, Fred (Pokey) Blunt, stands only five feet seven as compared with Groza's six feet three inches.

Phillips, who has more than a score of colleges seeking his pigskin services, is rated the greatest scholastic passer the state has even seen. He tossed 21 touchdown aerials in eight games, completing 18 of 24 in one contest and 17 of 23 in another. He threw five touchdown passes against one team, four against two others, and three in another game.

In addition to that he found time to score seven touchdowns, to boot 14 extra points from placement, and to call the signals which led his squad to seven wins and a tie. The tie was a thriller with Lakewood. The latter team led 20-0 in the third period, when Phillips uncorked two touchdown passes and scored another himself, along with booting the two extra points which drew Berea up on even terms.

The all-Ohio, with some 17,000 boys in the running, is tougher to "make" than the all-America college squad, when sheer numbers are considered. Nominations for the team ran into the hundreds, votes being cast by coaches, sports writers and officials.

With the field so huge, places could not be found on the top team for all the outstanding talent, such stars as De Mando of Massillon, Poremba of Cleveland Lincoln, Breese of Hamilton and Lothamer of Canton Lehman being relegated to the second string.

Maxin Meets Burman In 10-Round Cleveland Go.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Joey Maxin, the 19-year-old Clevelander who used to be an amateur champ, gets a real trial of strength tonight against the veteran Red Burman of Baltimore, in one of three 10-round matches on the News' annual Christmas fund show.

Maxin, former Golden Gloves and National Amateur middleweight king, has grown up into the heavyweight class.

Ceferino Garcia of Los Angeles takes on Anton Christoforidis, who once had some claims on the light heavyweight title.

The other 10-rounder brings together Harry Weekly, the Alliance boy who has been fighting out of New Orleans, and Fritzie Zivic of Pittsburgh, in a welterweight contest. Zivic formerly held the welterweight crown.

In a six-round preliminary, Marcellina Borrado, Mexican lightweight, will be after his second knockout of Joe Pirrone, Clevelander. Also in six rounds, Johnny Lawer of Cleveland makes his first professional start against Don Blatchford of Lorain. This is a welterweight match.

ASK RETURN TO OLD FOLKS HOME

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(U.P.)—"Be it ever so humble," even though it is the Jackson County Home for the Aged—"there is no place like home" to some of the folk who once made the county institution their abode.

Judge Fred W. Klaber, of the western district of the county court, said he had received letters from several former inmates who had asked that they be allowed to return from homes made possible upon acceptance of old age pensions.

The court said it was powerless to investigate or to act since the question now rests with the state social security board.

BETTER NEWS HELPS STOCK MART PRICES

Fractional Advances Found In Most Departments; Dealings Slow.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A slight turn for the better in the news helped steady today's stock market although failing to touch off any real rally.

Slightly mixed tendencies at the start were succeeded by fractional advances in most departments near the second hour. There were scattered exceptions. Dealings were slow.

Reviving boardroom optimism to some extent, brokers said, were reports of German reverses in Russia and the action of Japan in requesting continuance of negotiations at Washington for adjustment of Far Eastern differences. Hopes for a quick peace in the railway labor controversy were helpful. The business scene was without much change as a speculative factor.

Market trend students scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said opinion was growing that lack of scrap would be even more acute in 1942 as a result of the thorough combing of all sources of miscellaneous grades this year.

POINT TO FARM MACHINERY NEED

Agriculture Officials Are Perturbed at Defense Limit on Materials.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Agriculture department officials were perturbed today over what they said was the failure of defense authorities to recognize agriculture's needs for machinery and farm equipment if it is to meet unprecedented food requirements.

Farmers, these officials said, face a studendous task in stepping up production of meats, dairy and poultry products, and vegetables to supply a sharply expanding domestic market and a large part of Great Britain's needs. Many farmers have reported that they may be unable to meet their individual production goals unless they get additional equipment.

The office of production management has allotted materials for only 80 per cent of farm equipment sold during the last quarter of 1940. Agriculture department officials say this allotment is sufficient to meet farmers' "most urgent needs" if farmers defer purchase of everything not immediately needed.

The sharpest pinch is being felt, these officials said, in equipment needed by dairy and poultry farmers.

One high placed farm official said the agriculture department was experiencing "great difficulty" in convincing priority authorities that the production of food should be considered just as much a defense industry as production of airplanes, tanks, and munitions.

This official said defense authorities were inclined to confuse surpluses of agricultural raw materials, such as corn, wheat and other livestock feeds, with plentiful food supplies. Machinery is necessary, he said, to convert these materials into food products.

COUNCIL TAKES UP INCREASE IN PAY TOMORROW

Wage Adjustments To Be Acted Upon By City Fathers at December Meeting.

Wage adjustments and increases for approximately 180 city employes will be considered by city council at its December meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the municipal building, Fred Miller, chairman of council's finance committee, announced today.

Miller said that legislation had been drawn up to give employes a genera lincrease of 6.6 per cent to enable them to meet the rising cost of living and to readjust long-existing differences in the wage scale.

Members of Local 128, Municipal employes union, and of the Mansfield fire department will meet with the salary and finance committees tomorrow at 7 p. m., to discuss the proposed increases.

Miller sai dtoday that there "was some dissatisfaction" on the part of these employes which he hoped would be cleared up at the conference. The meeting will be held in City Auditor Paul L. Kelley's office.

At its regular meeting, council will also be asked:

To pass an ordinance repealing its legislation concerning the control of the city parks, thereby allowing the park commission to exert full authority over the parks.

To permit the temporary installation of a traffic light at West Park Drive. The light was intended for installation at Sturges and Glessner avenues but was put at West Park Drive and Park avenue west to mark the detour from Fourth street because of construction work on U. S. Route 30-N, west of the city.

To make necessary changes in the city's traffic code to have it coordinate with the new state traffic code.

Map Shows Japan's Threat To Thailand

This map shows how a Japanese invasion of Thailand would cut off the land route connecting British India with the Malay Peninsula and Singapore. Thus, military observers see the Japanese threat aimed not only at the little Asiatic nation but also at the British Empire, making Britain and Russia divert supplies from the Eastern Front. In addition, the Japanese would be in position to stop material going to China by way of the Burma Road.

SPORTS

Bowl Teams High Scoring

All Grid Squads Playing Jan. 1 After Scores.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Touchdown conscious elevens predominate the selections made for the various New Year's Day bowl games with only Oregon State, Rose Bowl host, classed as a defensive unit although Missori's No. 1 Sugar Bowl line hasn't yielded a touchdown all season.

The West Coast school needed 20 hours of discussion before selecting Duke, unbeaten and powerful enough to collect 311 points in nine games, as its Jan. 1 guest at Pasadena. The Duke touchdown-collection is a record for the Blue Devils.

Simultaneous with the Missouri acceptance, Sugar Bowl officials named Fordham as the Tiger foe in the New Orleans classic.

Even before Frankie Sinkwich and his Georgia mates had left the showers Saturday after blanking Georgia Tech, 21-0, the Orange Bowl committee in Miami selected the Bulldogs as their southern choice. The equally point-crazy Texas Longhorns have been chosen, unofficially as the opponent.

Texas A. & M., first Southwest conference school to share in three consecutive loop titles, and a 13-12 victor in the Dallas Cotton Bowl a year ago, returns there. Unbeaten Duquesne, Mississippi State and Penn State are among the possible foes.
